Mrs. Snyder and Gray Are Reviled In Summations

Millard, Counsel for Gray, Asks Verdict of Manslaughter—Mrs. Snyder's Counsel Shows and Stamps in His Attack Upon Gray.

Queens County Court House, New York, May 9 (AP).—Summation in the Snyder murder trial was begun in Supreme court this morning.

William Millard, of counsel for Henry Judd Gray, was the first to address the jury. Justice Scudder denied motions of defense for a mistrial.

Though a steady rain was falling Courtroom Square was filled before nine o'clock. The spectators were almost entirely women and they were packed in closer than the throngs in a bargain basement.

The echoing room buzzed with excited chatter as the woman speculated on the expected dramatics of the summations and wondered how soon the case might be expected to go to the jury.

"I am going to plead you," Millard told the jury. "Just as though Judd Gray was my boy, because I believe in him."

He then outlined Gray's home background during his youth, the care his mother gave him, his church affiliations.

Attacks Mrs. Snyder. Millard pictured the bright future which spread out before Gray as he became a success in business, married and had a daughter.

"Then, suddenly," he said, "in 1925 a sinister, fascinating, unscrupulous woman came across his path. What a catastrophe that those two had ever met."

"I would not blacken any woman's name if I could help, but you must have the truth."

"That woman, like a poisonous serpent drew Judd Gray into her glistening coils and there was no escape."

Millard said that Gray turned to the stimulation of whiskey because he was exhausted by the stormy nature of his love. "And while he was under the influence of drink," Millard said, "he inserted into his weakened mind her desire, her determination, to kill her husband."

As Millard spoke, Gray sat behind him in silent gloom, looking at the floor. Mrs. Snyder twisted her face in a grimace.

Millard told the jury that Gray had no motive for the murder. "Whereas Mrs. Snyder, if her plan went through, got $36,000 insurance."

To show Gray's condition of subervience, Millard cited Gray's testimony that Mrs. Snyder had "tried to" sleeping powder on him and he had permitted such use of himself. Of Haddon Gray of Syracuse, who arranged the alibi for Judd Gray, Millard said: "God grant that we may all have friends like that."

Asks for Manslaughter. Millard concluded by asking that "those who have never known the temptations of life cast the stone of contempt."

"But you and I," he said to the jury, "will go down into the mire where this poor fool had been dragged by a wicked woman who was herself a slave to her burning passions and have him."

"The extreme culpability of this poor defendant is manslaughter. I would like to ask for a verdict of innocence, but I can see that you may feel he must bear some share of punishment because he fell slave to this woman."

"His mother will be waiting for your word. May God help you and guide you."

Millard then sat down after speaking for one hour and 35 minutes.

Wallace Annals Gray.

Dana Wallace, for Mrs. Snyder, told the jury that "this is a case of the people of New York and Henry Judd Gray against Snyder."

"And Henry Judd Gray," he said, "is the most despicable creature that I have ever seen. And Ruth Snyder has been put in a position by this double prosecution that is extremely unfair."

Wallace read from the opening statement for Gray in which it was said his confession was untrue and was obtained under duress.

"Why then," he asked, "if that was what they meant to do, did Gray get on the stand and say the confession was voluntary and true? Was Gray lying to us or had he lied to his own lawyer? Which is the more likely?"

He was particularly severe about the "double" charges.

"Was he dominated when they went on that dangerous trip?" he asked. "Did he ask to be taken on a honeymoon? No. He urged her to go and I believe that Haddon Gray went with them on the road."

As to the four ounce bottle, Wallace said Gray was not so affected that he lost his memory. "He has told us in detail of all he did in the last hours."

Wallace charged that Gray's whole case was based on a desire to "hide behind a woman's skirt."

"We have never believed Mrs. Snyder guilty and we do not believe to see," he said.

"It was Judd Gray who took off his clothes and covered himself with a sack weight for comfort with a sleeping man."

Wallace retired at 1:40 o'clock, with a cheering plea that Mrs. Snyder be found not guilty.

Napanoch Inmate Seeks Freedom

Wants Release From State Institution—Wanted to Buy Gloves But Forgot to Pay For Them.

Jacob Richardson, an inmate of the Napanoch Institution for Delinquent Delinquents, applied to the Supreme court for release under a habeas corpus writ and the matter came up before Judge Hasbrouck at special term on Saturday. Jacob was transferred to Napanoch last November after he had been arrested on a charge of petit larceny in stealing a pair of gloves from Kate's store in New York city. He told the court he wanted to buy the gloves but forgot to pay for them. Judge Hasbrouck remanded the prisoner to Napanoch and held the matter for further hearing in November and suggested that his counsel apply to the parole board for parole.

Richardson said he was arrested for stealing a pair of gloves and when arraigned in court pleaded guilty and sentence was suspended but he was sent to the Bellevue for observation and examination. After examination he was sent to Napanoch as a mental defective. In 1926 he was sentenced to an institution for mental defectives and was released in 1926 on application of his friends. Again in 1927 he was charged with petit larceny and again sent to the Rome State School, where he remained a year and again was released on application of friends and relatives. He remained out of trouble until last year when he again committed petit larceny. His relatives now seek to have him released and claim they will attend to him and keep him out of trouble. His mental tests show an age between 7 and 8 years although he is 39 years old. The habeas corpus proceeding was adjourned until the first Saturday in November and in the meantime his application will be made for a parole.

Richardson has never been arrested for a serious crime but his violations have been for petit larceny. When out of an institution he is employed.

Nungesser Plane Reported Sighted Off Newfoundland

Aviators Have a Thousand Miles of Sea to Traverse in Advance Weather or Conditions to Complete Their Flight to New York Flight.

(By The Associated Press.) The Nungesser plane "White Bird" was sighted off Cape Race, Newfoundland, at ten o'clock, this morning, as the aircraft was received today by the New York Times from its correspondent at Sydney, Nova Scotia. Should the report prove accurate and the daring aviators, Captain Nungesser and Coli successfully pursue the remaining thousand miles of their course over the misty Atlantic they should reach their goal of the Paris to New York flight about eight o'clock tonight (eastern daylight).

Earlier in the day a report received by the French cable company stated that the radio operator at St. Pierre, Miquelon, had received word that Nungesser had been sighted over Newfoundland. This report lacked confirmation from any source. Celebration at Paris. The Havas Agency in New York advised its home office in Paris that they had a definite report from St. Pierre, Miquelon, that the "White Bird" had been sighted over the island at 8:15 o'clock this morning. The French Capital dispatch received in New York shortly after 11 o'clock stated that the Nungesser plane had not been sighted over the island up to 9 o'clock, Atlantic daylight time, today.

The broad reaches of the eastern Atlantic still hold within their grasp the success or failure of the Nungesser flight. Reported off Cape Race, Newfoundland, the aviators have yet about a thousand miles of sea in adverse weather conditions.

The weather off Newfoundland was clear this morning but off the south-west the daring pioneers of the air were now winging their way with a lowering gasoline supply and facing mist and rain with lower visibility that will try every bit of courage they can summon.

Troublesome Weather. Aviators at Mitchell Field said that under the weather conditions now obtaining if Captain Nungesser could make a landing in New York he would have performed a miracle even greater than that of crossing the Atlantic. The searchlights were turned on during the day at Mitchell Field to aid the fliers.

Evidence of the distressing flying weather in and about New York was had when Commander Francesco De Pinedo, the Italian flier, was forced down in the heavy fog in Long Island sound on his flight to Philadelphia from Boston.

No Word From Fliers. If the "White Bird" were off Cape Race, Newfoundland, her course would naturally lie across the Cape Canis, Nova Scotia, and then skirting the short line of Nova Scotia past Cape Sable, the aviators would head the "White Bird" for Boston and New York.

Inquiries at noon at the Radio Corporation and independent wireless companies and the steamship companies with vessels at sea brought the response that no word had come from the "White Bird."

On Time Schedule. The reported sighting of the "white bird" was the first observation made since the Nungesser plane slipped out into the mist off Fastnet, Ireland, a few hours after Captain Nungesser and Coli hopped off from Le Bourget, France.

If the plane reported sighted off Newfoundland is the White Bird she has covered approximately 2,800 miles of her journey and is on the time schedule set by Captain Coli, her navigator. The plane was due on the northeast tip of Newfoundland about 27 hours after her departure from the flying field near Paris.

The dispatch from St. Pierre, Miquelon, did not state at what point in Newfoundland the plane was sighted but the belief in aviation circles here is that Captain Nungesser, having dropped his landing gear, would now hold his course southward along Nova Scotia shore and then head from Cape Sable across the sea toward Boston and thence along Long Island sound to New York.

A Canadian Press dispatch from Halifax, Nova Scotia, received here at 9 o'clock, eastern daylight time, stated that St. John's, Newfoundland had telegraphed that up to 8:30 o'clock this morning nothing had been seen of the White Bird over Newfoundland. Efforts were made to have the Western Union here confirm the dispatch received by the radio station at St. Pierre, Miquelon.

Check To Verify Report. A report received here this morning by the French Cable Company stated that the Nungesser plane had been sighted by the Western Union over Newfoundland but of confirmation from every source was not obtained. Inquiries were made at the various radio stations and the Western Union could they were unable to verify the reports.

The Canadian Press received a dispatch from Halifax, N. S., which stated that "The Cape Race, N. E. Canadian government, advised at 10 o'clock (Atlantic time) this morning that no word had been received of the French aviators up to that hour."

Western Union Advises. The Associated Press tried the various wireless companies for confirmation of the reported sighting

About 12:45 o'clock this morning while Policeman William Hess was passing Converse street on his regular tour he was startled to see eleven recumbent figures on the ground, and walking closer he found that they were all men. From the odor that permeated the atmosphere they had also been indulging in "hard-stuff" for an empty three gallon jug also reposed on the ground nearby.

French "Tiger" Tilt

With Danish Critic

The late Georg Brandes, famous Danish critic, who was the same age as Georges Clemenceau, was bound to the French statesman by a friendship which lasted from the last years of the second empire until the middle of the World war.

The Dane, always haunted by his vision of a republic of Europe, wrote a book in which he passed stern and pessimistic judgment on the policy of the allies. To this Clemenceau retorted in a biting article which he entitled "Farewell to Brandes."

Brandes, however, did not say farewell to Clemenceau. One of his last critical articles was a review of the old Vendean's recently published "Demosthenes." He paid an eloquent tribute to Clemenceau's mental vigor and great culture; but he remarked, not without finesse, that the French statesman had exalted the Athenian patriot at the expense of the Athenian orator. Brandes considered that the greatness of Demosthenes was due more to his oratorical genius than to his stubborn policy of chauvinism.

"To Clemenceau," he wrote, "Philip of Macedon and Alexander were foreigners and barbarians lightly dusted with Greek culture. The Macedonians of course were not Greeks. Yet Alexander, a cosmopolitan, spoke perfect Greek and slept with the 'Iliad' under his pillow, while Aristotle guided his thoughts. How can he be represented as a barbarian adversary of the true Greek spirit?"

"Demosthenes' narrow idealism resulted in the destruction of the splendid cities of Greece which a more realistic policy might have preserved perhaps for centuries. Demosthenes defended the ancestral tradition, Athenian idealism and honor, with a vigor and nobility which were admirable, yet fatal to the real interests of Athens, which were those of the whole universe."—From L'Europe Nouvelle, Paris. Scrubwoman Starves

Despite Big Fortune

Paris.—A millionaire scrubwoman, who rummages in garbage cans and bags on the sidewalks, has been found by the police. Privations, they say, are killing her.

Keeping secret her name, the authorities nevertheless vouch for her ownership of the apartment building where she lives in an unheated attic room.

Her income exceeds that of Premier Poincaré. Besides the Paris building, she owns two houses in Arras, three farms and some securities, all valued at more than 2,000,000 francs.

When her day's work is done she begs at church ceremonies. She takes food, clothing and usable articles out of the garbage cans that line Paris sidewalks at dark or dawn.

She was arrested when she followed a wedding party to the bride's home to beg, but was quickly released.

MUSICAL CASH REGISTER HOLDS THIEF SPELLBOUND

Entranced by Harmony He Falls to Notice Policeman Climbing Through Window.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—When William Dwyer, thirty, of Brooklyn pleaded guilty to a burglary charge the other day in Tombs court and was held in $5,000 bail for the grand jury, the story of how a musical cash register did just what it was designed to do was revealed.

Dwyer was caught by Patrolman Sweeney robbing the restaurant at 200 Canal street early one morning after he had taken the empty drawer from the cash register, thus starting the music box therein to function.

Dwyer was so taken up with the idea, it was said, that he failed to notice the patrolman climbing through a window. Sweeney had heard the tinkling notes as he was mounting down the street at dawn, and discovered that the cash register had been lifted from its accustomed place on the cashier's desk to the kitchen in the rear, whence the music came.

"No use to argue over that," Dwyer was reported to have remarked as he awaited examination before Magistrate Weil.

Finds Real Paradise;

Acquires 100,000 Acres

Los Angeles, Calif.—All his long and eventful life Ted McClammy, old-time cattleman and soldier of fortune, has been in search of "Paradise." Several times he has thought that he was about to make the discovery, with the assistance of an opponent's six-shooter. But now he has found it, and it isn't in heaven at all—it's down in the Tropic valley, in the state of Nayarit, on the west coast of Mexico.

There, according to Mr. McClammy, lies everything that a man, in his most imaginative moments, could ask for. Bananas, coffee, sugar cane, avocados, citrus fruits, in fact, all kinds of fruits, vegetables and cereals, grow there abundantly, he says. His climate is the most equable to be found, varying only ten degrees.

Because of the altitude—the valley is 4,000 feet above sea level—it never grows hot, and because of non-bruise influence and its geographical location it never grows cold. And, best of all, it has an average rainfall of 40 inches a year, which makes irrigation unnecessary.

So impressed was he with the spot that he has purchased 100,000 acres in the valley, which he and his sons intend to farm, he said.

Use Eggs as Currency in Russian Province

Samara, U. S. S. R.—Shortage of ready cash is causing the inhabitants of this provincial Russian town to use eggs as currency.

Twenty fresh eggs are given for a quart of vodka, 12 for a pound of beef, 4 for a pound of sugar, 3 for a loaf of bread. A suit of clothes costs 2,000 eggs, while a pair of shoes can be had for 300 eggs.

Village doctors often accept eggs in payment of services. The same practice prevails among rural priests, one of whom recently became wealthy by charging 40 eggs for officiating at each wedding in the village, the bride contributing 30 eggs and the groom 10. Each birth and death brought him additional "revenue" in the form of eggs, every family contributing six eggs.

"Twin Pearls of the Pacific"

Now Widely Separated

Honolulu, Wash.—About a year ago the four-wheeled automobiles of the Hawaiian Islands were filled with their early drivers and were filled with curiosity of the local. The two ships, which have been named the "Twin Pearls of the Pacific," are now widely separated and engaged in slugging connected action. The Albatross, which was the race after 100 days of sailing, is operating between north Atlantic and Central American ports. The other ship, the "Twin Pearl," and acts as a trading schooner for native produce companies, doing deep sea local work.

MOONLIGHT PARTY

I must tell you of a party the gray night-flying moths gave the other night.

Some of the moths and small butterflies were there—in fact, as many of the moth and butterfly family who were up and ready for the summer.

The tortricids, the tinea, the black-streaked brown butterflies, the blue butterflies and the elms were all there.

On a bright moonlight night, they really did have quite a large party. The moon was shining brightly and made the night light. The stars twinkled and blinked way up in the sky, just as if they were in the party, too.

At least they did seem to be trying to help along the gaiety of the party by being just as bright as they possibly could be.

They looked down over the party just as if they wanted to look very, very merry.

The man in the moon was winking and grinning and saying: "Ha, ha, it does my heart good to see a fine party, and more especially to see all the little butterflies and moths once more having a good time."

They certainly did have a good time. They danced such fairy-like dances, and they watched their shadows under the moonlight.

They all felt so glad to be alive and dancing, and playing once more did make them happy.

After they had danced for some time they had a supper of apple worms and delicious fruit buds.

They had danced so long that it seemed nice to have a supper party all together.

They all sat on the bushes and ate their supper.

But after it was all over they still wanted the party to continue. So the gray night-flying moth said:

"No one must go to bed yet. The party isn't over."

"We'll feel very good if you go home so soon."

All the other butterflies and moths chimed in at once:

"Oh, gray night flying moths, you are most wonderful moths, and you give the most marvelous parties!"

"None of us has ever had such a fine party before, and we certainly do not want to go home."

"We'll stay ever and ever so much longer—until very, very late."

At that the moon again winked and grinned and said:

"I'm going to stay up all night, so why shouldn't all you moths and butterflies?"

"I like company, and I like to be amused, and you can't make me sleepy or tired."

So the party continued for a good long time!

The Man in the Moon.

Buildings in the Way

Edward had spent nearly every day of his five years on a ranch, and had never seen a town bigger than the nearest small village. But he had heard so much about the wonders of the city from older sisters and brothers, that he looked forward to seeing it as the treat of his young life.

Finally, when his father took him to the city on his sixth birthday, his excitement knew no bounds. But he must have expected something more than he found, because on his return when he was asked, "Well, Ted, did you see the city?" he replied with deep disgust, "Now, couldn't you see for all the houses being in the way."

Too Old for His Shoes

Jack stopped at his father's office one noon to be taken home to lunch. He was limping like an old man. Naturally, we asked him if he had hurt his foot.

Jack replied, "Yes, I did. I'm five years old now and I'm too old for my shoes."

Smart As a Whip

Jimmy was proud of his new two brothers and anxious to show them to his friends. Bringing home a number of boys one day, he cautioned them before going to, saying: "Don't make any noise or touch 'em, 'cause they have awful temp."

The king's signet

IN THE old days, when kings counted for more than they do now, the bearer of the king's signet was a person of the first importance. Gates flew open before him, difficulties dissolved, the whole realm hastened to speed him to his purpose. For the royal ring was the badge of supreme authority. It was the kingly trademark. Wherever it went, it was known and respected as the outward symbol of stability and power.

There are hundreds of trade-marks today which mean as much in the realm of commerce as the king's signet once meant in the realm of government. To the buying public, they represent honest manufacture, sound value, fair pricing. They are recognized everywhere as the passports to public preference. Yet this confidence was not won in a day. It was built up slowly, conscientiously, on the solid foundation of quality and straight dealing. Above all, it required systematic and truthful advertising.

Advertisements are messengers sent by dealers of established reputation to tell you where you can buy economically and to best advantage. They bear the badge of authority, the stamp of reliability, the king's signet of honest worth. They are worthy of your confidence and respect.

Baby Party at The Benedictine

Benedictine Auxiliary Members Asked To Be Present at National Hospital Day Celebration on May 12.

National Hospital Day will be fittingly celebrated at the Benedictine Hospital on Thursday, May 12. A large number of Kingston and Ulster county residents will no doubt avail themselves of the opportunity of visiting the Benedictine Hospital on that day. Visiting hours will prevail throughout the entire day and a most cordial welcome will be extended to all visitors.

In the afternoon from three to five the baby reunion will be held. Babies born in the hospital during the past two years and their mothers and relatives have been invited to attend this Baby Party. A very pleasant time is predicted for these wee guests and their escorts.

The members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Benedictine Hospital are requested to be at the hospital at two o'clock on National Hospital Day to assist in conducting guests throughout the hospital and to join in the pleasures of the Baby Party. Each member is earnestly requested to be present.

TOOK ALL DELIGHT FROM TRIP ABROAD

Traveler Writes Feeling of Passport Picture.

A real gentleman came in the other day (he is my friend forever now; I have great confidence in his taste) and asked why not more stuff about that trip abroad. "I read every word of it," he swore glibly, and I almost believed him. Those things "get to you" easier as you get older. The excuse I made for not doing more of it was the fear of boring an already too indulgent public.

But this perfect gentleman had hardly left the office when another man came in to ask about the trip abroad. He was going over in May. How about it? He began to talk about the passport and the passport picture. I haven't fully got over the shock of the latter yet. And it seems such a little thing, too—that passport picture.

The trouble with the passport picture is, or one of them, that the photographer gentleman isn't out to flatter you. He doesn't "touch you up" any. You just sit there in the picture like a solemn or grinning Hindu idol, unregenerate, and in all your undressed awfulness, unrelieved by shadow, without excuse and without hope in the world. Your skull bulges in the wrong places, your ears stand out, your bumps proclaim gluttony, licentiousness and avarice. Your expression is that of an unconquered rooster when chased, startled and distracted.

I shall never forget it. I looked upon the passport picture after the shooting was over and a perceptible shudder ran through me. Only by superhuman fortitude did I show it to a friend of forty years standing in the office and with the bitter cry: "This can't look like me!" But he was relentless.

"It's exactly the way you look!" I gazed at it for a long time and I finally said with something like a sigh: "Anyhow, God loves me!"

And that is what you have to go through to get the unflattering passport picture and to get over it before embarking on the great deep. It has taken away much of my desire to go to Europe again, if that has to be done over again. And I suppose that must have been exactly the way I looked to the Europeans! They are certainly a polite race. Nobody said anything.

Of course, a man ought to forget himself; if he is out for a holiday, and just sit back and enjoy life. He should forget family, and friends, and early training, and the office, and business, and think of himself as a young millionaire poet and novelist tasting the nectar of life from the golden cup of the gods so freely held to his lips. And this I came very near doing. Once about a hundred and fifty miles from land, the remembrance of the passport picture somehow rolled off of my heart and buried itself fifty fathoms deep and I suffered a sea change into something new and strange, and began to take notice of a few of the companions de voyage—mostly females. A. J. R. in the Minneapolis Journal.

Ingenious Advertising

The city of Berlin is proud of the stage settings provided for performances of notable works at its city opera and in turning them to advertising advantage. In one of the windows of the large city information bureau which the municipality maintains near Potsdamer platz some especially good sets are reproduced in miniature. The brilliantly illuminated tiny stages with distinctive reproductions of the settings all in place inevitably attract the eye of the passerby. Attention is added to the scene by a lightning figure or two of characters from the opera being advertised.

Woman's Boss, But Ball Club Isn't Worried

Mrs. Otto Borchert, widow of the late owner, now is directing the affairs of the Milwaukee American Association baseball club.

By L. E. EARLY, International Illustrated News Staff Correspondent.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (I-I-N) Special)—"I have no novel ideas about running a ball club," says Mrs. Otto Borchert.

So the city that beer made famous isn't worried because a woman is again directing the affairs of the American Association ball team. Neither is the team.

Mrs. Borchert, widow of the late owner, hasn't any present plans for selling the club, and expects to continue as president. This is the second time a woman has been boss of the brewers, as the team is naturally known. Mrs. Charles Havenor, fell heir to the stock at the death of her husband fifteen years ago. The club is now valued at about $200,000, and under Otto Borchert was a tremendous money-maker.

Borchert, from a $50-a-week salary as a tobacco salesman, became a millionaire in twelve years. His fortune was founded in a $5,000 investment in the ball club.

One other woman now is the director of an important baseball team. She is Mrs. James O. Dunn, owner of the Cleveland Indians. Mrs. Helen Britton ran the St. Louis Cardinals for sometime after her husband's death. It is now in other hands.

5 Incorporations In Ulster County

Albany, May 9.—New York state residents may soon be laying a wager on racing greyhounds, for among the many companies of all sorts and descriptions that were incorporated in this state during the past month was one giving its object as greyhound racing. Another company incorporated during the month plans to turn out some sort of a device to regulate the speed of automobiles, while the approach of summer is heralded by the incorporation of a circus or two. Real estate led all other companies, while garment-making ran strong with sixty-one companies for the month.

The report of Robert Moses, Secretary of State, covering the activities of the corporation bureau for April shows a total of 2,310 companies as having been incorporated during the month. For the first four months this year a total has been reached of 9,424 companies as against 9,352 companies during the corresponding period last year. Of the 2,310 companies last month, there were 346 incorporated from outside of New York city. Last month's companies were characterized in many instances by unusually heavy capitalization. Outside of New York city, Westchester county led with 67 companies for the month, Erie county having 54, Nassau 45, while Monroe and Onondaga had 23 each. In Ulster county, five companies incorporated last month, with a total capitalization of $41,000.
